

GRADUATE EDUCATION PROGRAMS

The mission of Bethel College graduate degree programs in education is to prepare wise leaders for our nation's schools. The graduate program prepares teachers and school administrators to be wise leaders in their classrooms, in their schools and in their communities. Candidates will be enabled to competently perform the roles associated with excellence in teaching and with effective, ethical school leadership. Candidates view their own development (intellectual, social, physical, spiritual and professional) as a life long process.

Program completers will be educators who remain aware of current developments in education and in their field of specialization, model a spirit of inquiry, provide an atmosphere for the development of the whole person, make wise leadership decisions and who are professional in their approach to and attitude about teaching and school leadership.

Graduate Programs in Education

Graduate study in education at Bethel College can lead to a Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) degree or a Master of Education (M.Ed.) degree. The MAT program is for individuals who want to earn an initial teaching license, and the M.Ed. program offers several options for individuals who already have a teaching license.

Description of Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) Program

The MAT program is designed for candidates who are seeking initial teacher certification. The MAT program begins with the Bethel College graduate level Transition to Teaching program (18-24 credit hours) leading to an Indiana teaching license. Transition to Teaching is a one-year cohort program beginning each May. The Bethel College Transition to Teaching program is designed for individuals who have completed a bachelor's degree and want to become licensed teachers. Upon completion of the Transition to Teaching component and passing scores on all required licensure tests, candidates are eligible for an Indiana Teaching license. Transition to Teaching program completers are able to earn the Master of Arts in Teaching degree by taking an additional 12-18 credit hours, for a total of 36 credit hours of graduate study.
